From the CEO

A planet in peril, an economy in crisis is how the times we are passing through have been described. There has never been a time more pressing than now for a task never more imperative than this: to re-examine the fundamentals that govern economic and environmental decisions globally, nationally and locally. Sadly though, the process of revisiting is still seen as the prerogative of people privileged enough to suffer the least impact of the (shall I say, civilisational) crisis that we face. Analysis and remedial policy prescriptions still emanate globally from the North, nationally from a political capital firmly under the siege of big business and locally from (still) feudally entrenched vested interests.

Practitioners and proponents of participatory processes, indeed participatory democracy, have also not faced times as challenging and potentially exciting as the present. The free market jingoism that drowned out our fervent pleas to ‘include the excluded’ is now substantially muted. Financial capitalism that transferred billions across continents in nano seconds and mocked at the dispossessed (there is no free lunch, no matter what data your participatory rural appraisals churn out) is now queuing up at its flagship institutions for survival doles from the national exchequers.
Rather than gloating with the familiar we told you so rhetoric, this is the opportunity to hone our skills and examine our methodologies to effectively build-in mechanisms to offset the still persisting exclusiveness of the socio-economic arena. Our work in empowering and linking invisible communities should present a credible challenge to the vested interests determined to quick fix the crisis and double speed the return to business as usual. But more significantly it should seek to offer a perspective to address the problems that confront humanity at this historical juncture comprehensively, indeed structurally.

In the light of what we have set out to accomplish over the last year I look forward to sharing our work and accomplishments while we continue to strengthen our base and extend our vision, mission and values both in India and abroad.

From Praxis’s early beginnings twelve years ago we have continued to break new ground on diverse fronts. The projects of the last year address the rights of the most marginalised and excluded groups such as - children, dalit communities, the people of the Kosi Basin, sexual minorities, injecting drug users, people with leprosy and disabilities and bonded labour being among the groups we have reached out to.

The steady growth of Praxis UK is a testimony to the quiet strength and commitment to engagement with participatory tools and methodologies as a viable means to development. The role of Praxis UK is pivotal in representing the issues of the South to the North and creating a platform for Praxis’s mission, vision and values in Europe and Africa.

As we move forward I cannot but thank the Praxis team without whom we could not have achieved all that we have, your sincere commitment and unique strengths not to mention the camaraderie has seen us through good times and bad.

I thank you all for being part of this incredible journey.

Revisiting April 2008 – March 2009

Praxis-Institute for Participatory Practices is a not for profit organisation set up in 1997 to promote participatory practices in all spheres of human development. Over the years it has evolved as an autonomous entity that has become synonymous with participation in the development sector.

As an organisation Praxis believes in inclusive development by building the capacity of the poor and the marginalised. Enlarging its vision and mission through trainings, capacity building, community mobilisation and advocacy, Praxis has set in motion the process of active participation in decision-making. Over the past year we have worked with some of the most marginalised groups such as children, dalit communities, the elderly, sexual minorities, injecting drug users, people with leprosy and disabilities, the river people of Kosi to name a few. Praxis extends its vision, mission, and values through Praxis UK, to include the people of Africa and Europe while providing a platform for the issues of the South to be represented in the North.

Included are some of the major projects and events as well as professional assignments and internal advocacy initiatives undertaken between April 2008 – March 2009. A list of all projects with details of donors can be found in the annexure.
Voices of the People of Kosi

Advocacy - Kosi Yatra

On October 12, 2008 the Kosi Yatra began from Kusaha, the point where the embankment breached. The Yatra concluded on October 21, 2008 at Kursela where the Kosi river flows into the Ganga. The exploration was an attempt by Praxis to follow the trail left by the devastating Kosi floods of 2008, to get a sense of the damage caused and to extend support and solidarity to the affected communities. It was the first attempt of its kind by any institution, government or non-government to travel through the changed course of the Kosi river, as a result of the breach of the eastern embankment at Kusaha. People on the boat included engineers, academicians, social activists and panchayat leaders, besides members of the Praxis team.

Built nearly five decades ago to confine the river and provide security to inhabitants from flooding, the Kosi embankments have become a curse. Over the last fifty years there have been eight breaches in the embankment with disastrous consequences to life and property. People most affected by the floods are dalits, people belonging to backward classes and the elderly, who are excluded from relief and other support structures.
The breach in the eastern embankment in Kusaha in 2008 witnessed devastating floods in Northern Bihar. The change in its course caused colossal damage in areas that had been declared flood free for forty-five years leaving people unprepared and unequipped for the unprecedented havoc it caused - it was declared a national calamity.

In the course of ten days, it was found that over a million people had been displaced, structures like houses, canals, and drainage had been damaged, agricultural land was silted or waterlogged and could no longer be used for cultivation. The loss of lives, damage to property and displacement had precipitated a crisis on a scale unprecedented. In several places where the Kosi ploughed a new course, it caused havoc as people in the area had never experienced floods before.

Praxis continues working with its partner organisations within the Kosi Basin to find a sustainable and long-term solution to the man made ecological disaster that is gradually eating into the lives of over a million people who live along and between the embankments of the Kosi river.

Rights of Dalit Communities

An Assessment of Dalit Atrocity and Implementation of the SC/ST Act in Bihar

The Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act was enacted in 1989. The objective of the Act was to prevent widespread instances of atrocities against socially marginalised communities living in India. After nearly two decades of its enactment, atrocities against dalits continue to be perpetrated at the behest of socially dominant communities in Bihar. In August 2008, a Public Tribunal was held in Patna to understand the implementation of the SC/ST (Prevention of Atrocities) Act in Bihar. The meet was organised by the National Campaign on Dalit Human Rights (NCDHR) under the European Instrument for Democracy and Human Rights (EIDHR) project. It involved survivors of different kinds of atrocities and included women and men from communities belonging to the Scheduled Castes. Praxis supported in documenting the outcomes of the meet for implementation of the SC/ST (Prevention of Atrocities) Act in Bihar.
Dalit Watch Monitoring Report

The devastation caused by the breach in the embankment of the Kosi River near the Indo-Nepal border resulted in one of the worst floods in the history of Bihar in August 2008. The unforeseen disaster affected 18 districts; Supaul, Araria, Madhepura, Saharsa and Purnea being the worst hit.

Praxis, as Dalit Watch secretariat with other partner organisations came together to monitor relief camps set up in the aftermath of the floods of 2008 to address promptness in delivering relief and issues of discrimination against Dalits in the distribution process. The report titled ‘Morsel of Life’ in English ‘Jivan Ki Aas Ke Liye’ in Hindi was compiled and published by Dalit Watch with support from Praxis.

Empowering Sexual Minorities & Injecting Drug Users

Baseline Assessment Study for Monitoring Community Mobilisation for Avahan II

The Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation focuses on HIV prevention in India with the goal of reducing HIV prevalence among high-risk groups and stabilising infections among the general population. The Foundation’s Avahan program is one of the largest single HIV prevention programmes around the world. The first phase of the programme started in 2003 with community mobilisation as its central strategy.
In continuation with Avahan I the second phase is set to roll out from 2009 through 2013. One component of the HIV prevention project focuses on rigorous strengthening of community capacity and management capacity on the ground so that communities are ready to engage with government and operate institutions to help build their access to entitlements. With this objective, Avahan has been working on a community mobilization approach for the last few years with target groups such as female sex workers, men who have sex with men (MSM), transgender and injecting drug users.

Owing to challenges relating to monitoring the quality of processes of community mobilisation across the programme, there has been a need to reflect on the indicators to determine how change is happening at scale.

Employing its expertise in developing effective monitoring designs Praxis is assisting Avahan take the process forward by creating processes as well as a framework to facilitate periodic updating of minimum standards for community mobilisation. Praxis will also independently monitor the progress at the field level. In the first Baseline Assessment of Community Mobilisation for Avahan II a sample of about 40 Community Based Groups (CBG) were selected from a total of 120 CBGs across six states that are within the project purview. Andhra Pradesh, Karnataka, Maharashtra, Manipur, Nagaland and Tamil Nadu are the states in which the Baseline Assessment has been carried out. The tools employed were evolved through rigorous participatory processes with primary as well as other participating stakeholders, academic reflection, as well as extensive piloting and review of field level processes.

Praxis has built a software solution for the entry and analysis of all the information that has been collected in the field.

The information from the field is being used to understand the current level of community mobilisation as well as project areas where the CBG needs to be capacitated so that they can evolve into independent community led bodies to lead the processes for change in their respective domains of engagement.
People with Leprosy Will Have a Say

A Capacity Needs Assessment for The Leprosy Mission

The Leprosy Mission (TLM) works with people and communities affected by leprosy and disabilities, a highly stigmatised group in India. Having achieved the milestone of a sharp reduction in the number of leprosy affected persons in India, TLM has moved to the next level, shifting their focus from the provision of health services to working towards community organisation and empowerment in a participatory manner. The organisation is in the process of adopting new strategies of working and interacting with individuals and communities.

Recognising the needs of the staff to adopt new skills and competencies in development tools and practices, Praxis was called in to prepare a Capacity Needs Assessment to assist TLM improve their performance.

Praxis conducted a detailed study and investigation of current organisation structures, systems and processes to carry out Capacity Needs Assessment and training of core staff members of CBA division in different locations at Allahabad, Belgaum, Delhi, Kolkatta, Raipur, Villupuram, Vizianagaram. Praxis facilitated the process of Capacity Need Assessment for staff members in all project locations with a view to strengthen capacity of TLM staff in all areas of project cycle management.

Including the Voices of Children

Invisible and voiceless, protecting the rights of children continues to be an important initiative for Praxis.

Children are often left out of any serious discussion with regard to their own development or predicament almost by design. These studies were a reaffirmation of Praxis’s belief that everyone irrespective of their age, caste and gender, can participate actively in development debates. In both the study for Save the Children and the evaluation for Railway Children, Praxis took care to listen to children and foreground their concerns and points of view, it was key to finding solutions to address their problems.
Save the Children, Finland

Participatory Baseline Study on Child Rights of the Indigenous Community for eight villages of European Instrument for Democracy and Human Rights (EIDHR) Project, South Rajasthan, was conducted by Praxis for Save the Children, Finland. The study focused on understanding the nature, extent, magnitude and trends of the child rights’ violations and child abuse in eight villages of Udaipur and Dongarpur. This participatory research specifically explored the magnitude and forms of child abuse in the project districts, studied the profile of the abused children and the social and economic circumstances leading to their abuse. The Study focused on children belonging to tribal communities of Rajasthan.

Railway Children UK

Praxis organised the end - evaluation of the ‘Reintegration of platform children into society’ project implemented by Railway Children and its partners. The Programme is part-funded by Comic Relief. The Study team organised the evaluation during the period from December 15, 2008 to March 10, 2009. The team visited ten project sites across six states, in addition to meeting and consulting with Programme Officers and Country Director of Railway Children. The purpose of the evaluation was to consolidate the past learning before embarking to the next phase; to examine the underlying hypothesis of “Early intervention-Partnership-Reunification”; and to examine the role of RC in the successes and challenges in the partnership. The evaluation was carried out through a set of tools developed to enhance participation of the implementers as well as intended beneficiaries. Within the time constraints and other resource-related limitations, the evaluation was organized with a larger focus on strategic dimensions and enabling and constraining factors rather than getting into miniscule details of financials and target monitoring.

The Study met children on the platforms and at the drop-in-centres, and had group discussions with them on issues affecting their lives, including the possible solutions to address their problems. The voices of children captured by the team provided significant inputs for a comprehensive strategy for the reintegration of platform children.
Addressing Vulnerabilities of Bonded Labour

Rapid Appraisal of Vulnerability of Workers to Bondage Situations in Key Economic Sectors in Tamil Nadu

As part of the efforts to promote the ILO (International Labour Organisation) Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work, Praxis conducted rapid appraisal of vulnerability of workers to bondage situation in key economic sectors in Tamil Nadu with support from the ILO. The study spanned four months and was conducted in four sectors - rice mills, brick kilns, handlooms and stone quarries.

The study analyzed the living and working conditions of workers in the above four economic sectors in the identified blocks, by using qualitative and quantitative methods. It analyzed the preferred labour force management, recruitment practices, motivations of employers, employment trends and prospects of the sectors; and provided suggestions / recommendations for programme design to address vulnerabilities to bondage situations. Detailed data was collected, and analyzed on the different dimensions of life situations of workers in four sectors.
Voices of The Elderly in Bihar

Research & Support

Commissioned by HelpAge India (HAI), Praxis undertook a participatory study on conditions faced by the elderly persons in the flood affected district of Supaul in the month of November 2008. Covering 20 locations from Basantpur, Raghopur and Chhatapur blocks of Supaul district, the purpose of the study was to incorporate the findings through interventions with elderly people. Praxis provided support to HAI functionaries by sharing local knowledge and building linkages with local organisations to implement relief work.

Initially, Praxis provided administrative support to HAI for setting up administrative systems and processes by providing training to their volunteers in distributing relief aid, and facilitated them to conduct the study using participatory methods. The relief work was carried out in two phases. In the first phase of relief, medical support was provided to flood victims through Mobile Medical Unit (MMU). Praxis facilitated the process of identifying affected villages with the help of local NGO “Gram Bharti” and distribution of relief material to 1200 families in Nirmali and Araraha villages.

The learning experience of the first phase worked as a basis for the second phase wherein the routes for the MMU were pre-decided and local people had prior information about the MMU’s visit. The relief distribution was also regulated and provided to 3001 families across 5 panchayats. Verification of the beneficiary list... was conducted by individuals with no political or other sectarian affiliations to avoid exclusion.

Additionally, video documentation was undertaken as a part of the assignment, to expose the vulnerabilities faced by the elderly.

Engaging with the State

Support to Bihar Governance Reform Mission

Government of Bihar (GoB) has demonstrated the political will to undertake wide-ranging reforms. However, impact has been hampered by limited capacity.

The purpose of the programme is to improve the capability of GoB to deliver better quality services to all its citizens, particularly the poorest and most excluded. Praxis is providing its domain expertise to GoB in a three year partnership through a consortium led by Deloitte Touche Tohmatsu India Private Limited.

Trainings

Praxis has been conducting regular workshops and trainings for government institutions, various national and international development organisations and the corporate sector on a range of topics such as the basics of participation, introduction to participatory tools, micro level planning, participatory monitoring, and evaluation. Some of the training programmes undertaken include the following:

The Workshop 08

The international workshops in participatory development play a pivotal role in capacity building in participatory approaches of development professionals across the globe. During the year Praxis organised the 12th International Commune on Participatory Development.
For ten days, over 65 development professionals from across 15 countries in Africa, Europe, the Middle East and South, South-East and Central Asia resided at the Kerala Institute of Local Administration campus in Thrissur, to reflect, share and learn about participatory development. Four training modules were conducted:

1. Participatory Methods and Approaches
2. Community-led Local Level Planning
3. Community-led Monitoring and Evaluation
4. Corporate Social Responsibility and Community Development

The programme included general and specific module based theory, four days in various rural and peri-urban field settings, as appropriate to the module content, and finally a sharing, reflection and feedback session.

Immersions

“Immersions” have been described in many ways. To keep it simple, as the term itself suggests, it is a situation in which someone is fully absorbed by a certain reality. In our context, that “someone” is the development professional who, eager to get a first-hand understanding of people’s lives s/he is concerned with, decides to live among them for some time, as one of the community. In this sense, immersion represents a unique opportunity to learn about the complexities of people’s realities on their own terms and on more equal power relations.
Social Inclusion is one of UNICEF’s central pillars of work in the new Country Programme Strategy (2008-2012). ‘Immersions’ were seen as the ideal mechanisms by which UNICEF staff could reflect on the meaning of a commitment to social inclusion based on engagement and interaction with families, communities and children from socially excluded groups in the state/geographical contexts in which they work. UNICEF India contacted Praxis in order to initiate an immersion learning programme. A pilot immersion learning programme for UNICEF India took place from 24-28 November 2008 in Mohala block of Rajnandgaon District (Chhattisgarh) for a group of nine individuals, most belonging to the UNICEF State office of Chhattisgarh with the help of our local partners Samajik Sanstha and Ekta Parishad. The overall objective was to gain a first-hand understanding of social exclusion with a specific focus on Dalits and Adivasis.
UNICEF has also recently expressed interest for an immersion in Jharkhand, Rajasthan and Madhya Pradesh. New learnings are expected from these experiences; not only with regard to the immersion topic but also on the current Praxis design of Immersion, Insight.

Most Significant Change Trainings

The Most Significant Change (MSC) technique is a participatory monitoring and evaluation technique based on stories rather than indicators. MSC stories are about important or significant changes - they give a rich picture of the impact of development work and provide the basis for dialogue over key objectives and values of development programmes. It is participatory because many project stakeholders are involved both in deciding the kinds of change to be recorded and in analysing the data. It is a form of monitoring because it occurs throughout the programme cycle and provides information to help people manage the programme. It contributes to evaluation because it provides data on impact and outcomes that can be used to help assess the performance of the programme as a whole.

Two workshops on The Most Significant Change (MSC) technique took place in New Delhi from 24-25 November (for experienced users) and 27-28 November (for new users). Rick Davies, the developer of this technique and Veronica Magar, Director of REACH, facilitated these workshops. Eighteen participants attended the first event and around twenty-five attended the second one.

Perspective and Capacity Building Workshop on Social Equity Audit

Towards more inclusive and equity based development interventions.

The workshop was organised in the three states of Andhra Pradesh, Tamil Nadu and Kerala during April 2008. The focus of the workshops was on helping participants to understand and address structural, organisational and strategic constraints and bottlenecks that prevent/limit marginalised and vulnerable communities from equitable participation and benefit from sharing in development programs. It has further helped the Caritas India partners known as Diocesan Social Service Societies (DSSS) in Andhra Pradesh, Tamil Nadu and Kerala to re-evaluate their structure and programming to move towards more inclusion. The workshop also focused on helping organisations re-form their structure, systems and organisational processes in an inclusive manner by being attentive and giving visibility to the voices of the excluded within the organisation. The workshop helped participants become familiar with tools and methods for integrating the concerns of the excluded in design, planning, implementation, monitoring and evaluation in project management through participatory practices, a necessary step towards empowering the vulnerable.

Micro Level Planning

Praxis has been conducting Micro Level planning (MLP) training workshops in the past. Praxis facilitated a five-day training on Child Centred Micro Level planning for partner NGOs in Bihar for Plan (India), an organisation working on the issues of children. One of the outputs of the training programme was the preparation of a manual entitled ‘Child Rights and Micro Level Planning’. The manual identifies the needs of children, captures the process of MLP and the need to incorporate children’s voices while planning programmes for them from a rights based perspective.
Breaking The Silence

Praxis Productions

Ranked Outsider/ Kahye Bhaye Pardesi – A 27 min. film on migrant workers

A documentary film produced in English and Hindi captures the journey of migrant workers in the process of migrating from their state of origin to their destination.

Migration is a common phenomenon in Bihar where millions of workers migrate in search of livelihood. Migrant workers are particularly vulnerable to the deprivation of their fundamental human and labour rights. Their vulnerability arises from poverty and as a result they are not in a position to influence policy makers and implementers. ‘Ranked Outsider’/ ‘Kahye Bhaye Pardesi’ was produced by Praxis on the triumphs and traumas faced by migrant workers.

Dusk of Despair – A film on the fate of the aged in times of floods

“Dusk of Despair” is a documentary film produced by Praxis for HelpAge India on the plight of the elderly in a disaster. According to Census 2001, more than seven million people in India are above 60 years of age, of them, a very large percentage of the elderly live in the state of Bihar. The film depicts the hardships experienced by the elderly living in North Bihar where the Kosi floods occurred.

The elderly being extremely marginalised under regular circumstances were the most vulnerable section of the population during the Bihar floods in 2008. With almost no means of coping during the floods of 2008, they were abandoned to their fate by family members and a community struggling to survive the floods. The film in brief depicts the sorrows and tragedies experienced by the elderly during relief and rehabilitation camps organised after the flood.

An elderly woman in the film throws light on her situation, which could sum up the fate of the old, who at the twilight of their lives are forced to fend for themselves.
“Everything I owned has been washed away. My son and daughter-in-law have gone and left me alone here. I am living at the mercy of my village community. Since the floods, I have received nothing. I survive only on water.”

Participatory Poverty Assessments: A Guide for Critical Practitioners

It presents an introduction to the tools and methods of PPA as they have emerged through best practices and lessons. An attempt has been made to bridge the gap between the different strands of debate and practice.

It provides practitioners with an understanding of wider context and the debates, challenges and opportunities of PPA. An honest assessment of what PPA can and cannot achieve in the current development context has been aptly made in the book.

Patna’s Urban Poverty: A Report

A report on Patna’s urban poverty, based on an assessment undertaken by Praxis in collaboration with Nidan, was published with support of WaterAid in March 2009. Praxis had earlier conducted a training of resident representatives of ten slums of Patna and members of Jhuggi Jhopri Sangharsh Morcha in January 2009, who were assisted by the staff of Praxis and Nidan in undertaking fieldwork for the assessment. The report was put together by Praxis based on a synthesis of data generated under the assessment.
Praxis System Audit

Towards doing it better

Having completed twelve years in existence, a need was felt within Praxis to further strengthen organisational processes to ensure accountability within a democratic framework. Keeping in mind its primary goals and objectives, efforts were made to reduce the drudgery seen in traditional reporting and paradigm review.

The goal of the process was to help Praxis ‘do it better’ by revisiting the various processes, systems and methods practiced over the years without compromising on Praxis’s quality and competitive edge.

The key issues addressed were:

a) Improving Praxis’ internal systems (systems of communication, management of resources including financial & personnel)
b) Strengthening of knowledge production dynamics – consultancy, training and internal programme
c) Improving quality of Praxis’ services and products to the clients

The audit revisited the processes, systems and methods of doing business on a day-to-day basis in light of the vision, mission, values and strategies articulated by the team. It began with the deliberations that were held around this topic at the Annual Retreat 2008 where the team reviewed various activities and engagements of all the offices of Praxis (Delhi, Patna, Chennai and UK) and inputs were solicited from staff, clients and other concerned stakeholders.

All these processes led to a Systems Audit Workshop at Badkhal resort, Faridabad from February 21-23, 2009, to take concrete steps in ‘doing it better’.
Praxis in UK

Praxis UK is a registered charity set-up in October 2007. The goal of Praxis UK is to extend the vision, mission and values of Praxis to a wider global audience by working in the UK and Africa. Praxis UK aims to reflect the voices from the South, directly to the North through Praxis India. Its first three-year strategic framework for 2008 – 2010 outlines its four directions of building capacity, developing equitable partnerships, advocating for the right to participate and scaling up the use of participatory approaches for equitable and sustainable development.

It does this through providing technical support and capacity building services, resource mobilisation for Praxis India and running its own ‘home’ projects.

With regard to technical support, Praxis UK has quickly established itself as a lead provider of capacity building in participatory approaches and bringing best practice from India, to Europe and Africa. In the last year it has provided capacity building in participatory approaches to a wide range of organisations including the Universities of Bristol and Goldsmiths, The Brooke, the International Nut Producers Cooperative, and the International HIV/AIDS Alliance. A training for statutory and Third Sector organisations on the ‘The Duty to Involve’ – new UK legislation regarding citizen’s right to participate in the design and delivery of local services is on the anvil.

Praxis UK has also managed several major participatory evaluations, including two of national HIV community mobilisation projects for the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation. It has established close links with other leading participatory practitioners in the UK in order to identify synergies and partnerships for future work.

Praxis UK’s flagship project is the Voice of the Nile programme. The aim of this programme is to enable marginalised river dependant communities to have an active and influential voice in development decisions regarding the world’s longest river.

Rivers are a critical natural resource for poor communities throughout the world. But they are being depleted through climate change, pollution, over-use and inappropriate damming. How the poorest are being affected by these issues, how they are coping, and what support they need is not clearly understood. This ambitious four-year programme will therefore build the capacity of civil society throughout the ten Nile basin countries to assess the needs of the most vulnerable and communicate these needs to local, national, regional and international policy makers and planners. Towards this aim it has established partnerships with the main civil society and governmental umbrella bodies of the Nile and established an online platform for civil society organisations throughout the Nile to add their voice to the Nile.

With support from DFID, the international Scout Association and the Royal Geographical Society, the project has also established a development awareness programme to raise consciousness in the North of the plight of river-dependant communities in the developing world. The first stage of this saw scouts in the UK and India conduct research expedition down rivers in the UK and India, and comparing and contrasting how floods affect people along rivers in both countries, and the development of ‘Youth Manifesto’s’ to address the issues raised. These were then uploaded to an innovative Google Earth platform for young people to compare and contrast findings. In 2010 this will be scaled up with the world’s first expedition down the Blue and White Nile’s to raise international awareness of the voices of Nile dependant communities.

The Praxis UK office is based in central London with two permanent staff, several volunteers and, a pool of associated consultants. As part of the Voice of Nile project launched the Friends of the Nile in London and Brighton with members to providing occasional voluntary support and fundraising to the project.
Praxis in Afghanistan

Facilitating a Process of Fair Trade

Praxis had direct presence in Afghanistan between 2003 and 2005, to support the rehabilitation and reconstruction of Afghanistan through capacity building of national, regional, and local government, and of local and international organisations in community development. It has a continued commitment in supporting sustainable and equitable development and stability in Afghanistan and is keen to create an alternative to the common Afghan charity model of handouts, which only increase dependency on aid, create resentment in non-conflict affected regions and reduce sustainability.

Having worked closely with communities in various parts of Afghanistan, Praxis believes that an ideal way to do this is to optimally use locally available resources and skills. Afghanistan produces some of the world’s finest nuts, but current terms between the Afghan producers and consumers in Pakistan and India, are far from fair. So for Praxis UK to facilitate a fair trade process for Afghan nuts, may help to address some of Afghanistan’s development issues in a sustainable way.

Praxis UK has therefore teamed up with the International Nut Producers Cooperative to assess the viability of setting up a fair trade process which

- Offers self-reliance and an equitable and sustainable alternative to the current paradigms of charity and handouts.
- Significantly improves the management and business skills of communities.
- Increases transparency and accountability in management and commercial relations
- Offers payment of a fair price
- Increases gender equity
- Ensures safe working conditions
- Ensures environmental protection
